

DRAMATIS PERSONAE: Jim McDonald as Isocrates (the Famous One), Valerie the Tolerable Mudslug as Aristotle--behind closed doors, Rick Penticoff as a bad-tempered Quintillian, Jack Fracasso as a Welterweight Gorgias, Kaye Parker as the Sophistic Tradition, Joann Campbell as Belle Lettres, Mary Fracasso as Barbara Billingsley, Bob Wren as a bit of Phatic Discourse, Shelli Fowler as Plato (with a sinus condition) and Greg Lyons as Ion, dead this long year.

The membership, as a preamble to attending to its own business, queried Bob the Once and Ever Wren as to why there was no AGSE meeting on 14 March. Under torture, he replied that since no one attended, no meeting took place. The membership expressed its disappointment via knitting needles placed where the moon never shines. The membership claimed that an actual meeting is not required for the publication of the minutes. Chastised, Secretary Wren bit what was left of his thumb at the collective membership.

owered by inertia and indecision, the University Council has apparently decided to natural selection decide the issue. Ah, well, as Heraclitus said, "Strife is justice."

QUOTE OF THE WEEK:

"Civil disobedience with a heart is greater than  $n$  to the  $n$ th power when  $n=0$  and zero nothing but a name becomes in the language game, my friends."
